Andrew Macpherson

Managing Director, Prism Training & Consultancy

Andrew Macpherson has over 20 years of software development experience, and enjoys the most challenging data management, statistical visualisation and analysis problems. As Managing Director of Prism Training & Consultancy, he has executive responsibility for the business; he also maintains the company's statistical software tools, curates their library of training materials, and is a Course Leader for a number of their online and on-site workshops.

Andrew loves using, adapting and making software – and his programming, data management, analysis and visualisation skills are well suited to a wide range of useful applications.

He has produced countless macros, scripts, automations and programs for more than 20 years; these greatly assist Prism's clients, and allow the other Prism team members' ideas to become valuable software tools. Andrew also plays a key role in moving an ever-expanding range of statistical tools to our website, making them freely available to everyone.